SNOQUALMIE, Wash. (July 2, 2018) — Today, the celebrated Salish Lodge & Spa unveiled 86 newly renovated guestrooms, marking the completion of a significant two-phase remodel. The new room design reflects the surrounding Northwest landscape, including the majestic Snoqualmie Falls, along with upgraded features and luxury amenities inspired by the Lodge’s distinctive heritage. The $12 million renovation is the largest property improvement initiative undertaken at Salish since 1988.

“We are thrilled to announce the completion of our renovation,” said Salish General Manager Alan Stephens. “The contemporary mountainside concept honors the beloved Salish legacy, and each guestroom carries forward the signature, regionally inspired ambiance that has long characterized the property. As we enter this next chapter, we are excited to share the beautiful new look with our guests, whether they're first-time visitors or our loyal patrons who return year after year."

The redesigned guestrooms offer a luxurious, comfortable experience, reflecting the calm and contemplative Pacific Northwest environment. Each is decorated with locally crafted furnishings that incorporate natural textures, warm woods and organic fabrics. New in-room amenities include an upgraded fireplace and a deluxe bathroom that features guests' choice of either a spa-like shower with dual showerheads or an oversized soaking tub.

The corridors have been refreshed with new paint and carpet, while historic wood-burning fireplaces remain an iconic highlight throughout the Lodge, lobby and restaurants.

The property's award-winning spa has also undergone a refresh, including an expansion of the ladies' locker room and updates to the therapeutic soaking pools and steam room. The Lodge has also launched Club 268, whose name serves as a nod to Snoqualmie Falls' 268-foot height, as a premiere experience available with all spa-level River View King guestrooms. The enhanced offering includes unlimited access to The Spa's soaking pools and entrance to the Club 268 lounge, an exclusive gathering space offering daily continental breakfast, nightly hors d'oeuvres, beer and wine, a 75-inch HDTV and featuring a historic wood-burning fireplace.

MG2 was the architect and Absher Construction Company served as general contractor for the renovation.

Originally known as Snoqualmie Falls Lodge, Salish opened in 1916 as an eight-room inn that became a popular rest stop for travelers to fuel up on the multicourse Country Breakfast, which is still served in The Dining Room today. The Lodge was remodeled in 1988 and reopened as Salish Lodge. Today, Salish is proudly owned by the Muckleshoot Indian Tribe and operated by Columbia Hospitality, which is committed to maintaining Salish's traditions and legacy as a leading Northwest destination for lodging, dining and more.
